Short bio notes

Carlo Giupponi is Full Professor of Environmental Economics at the Department of Economics, Ca' Foscari University of Venice and Dean of the Venice International University. Before, he worked at faculties of agricultural sciences, serving as assistant professor at the University of Padova (1990-2002) and as associate professor at University of Milan "Statale" (2002-2007). His research activity focuses on sustainability science, valuation methods, the integrated assessment and management of natural resources, with main focus on water and agriculture, local to regional scales, and the interactions with global change drivers (climatic and socio-economic ones). The socio-ecosystems is the preferred analysis unit of human-nature spatial-temporal dynamics. Most research activities are in Europe and the Mediterranean Basin, but also in Asia and elsewhere. His most appreciated skills are the capacity to work in multidisciplinary teams and to provide scientific competences in diverse research contexts, but also in applied studies and consultancies. The most relevant original methodological contributions are in the field of disciplinary integration, by developing methods and tools adopting participatory techniques, system dynamics and spatial analysis as means for integrated assessment and decision support. Recent and current responsibilities of European and national research projects are the fields of climate change adaptation, natural hazards, vulnerability and risk assessment, integrated water management, and agri-environmental policy. Collaborations and consultancies include institutions such as Food and Agriculture Organisation, Intergovernmental Panel For Climate Change, World Bank, World Wildlife Fund, and national and local research centres and public administrations. Teaching activities are at graduate and undergraduate level on the following topics: Economics of the Environment, Natural Resources Management and Climate Change Adaptation. In recent times other courses were about methods of spatial analysis, modelling and valuation methods for the environment. He has co-authored more than 330 scientific and professional papers, and developed several modelling and decision support frameworks and tools in the field of natural resources management, in particular NetSyMod and mDSS (<http://www.netsymod.eu/mdss>). He was listed in the top 2% 2020 of international scientific authors of any discipline, based on standardized citation indicators and the Reuters 2020 "Hot List" of the 1000 most influential authors in the field of climate studies. Besides research and teaching, he is experienced in institutional and managerial responsibilities, with roles which included: member of the Board of the Italian Global Compact Network, member of the Board of Directors of the International Environmental Modelling and Software Society (IEMSS), coordinator of the PhD Programme on Climate Change Science and Management, director of the Interuniversity Doctoral School "ChangeS" (Global Change Science and Policy), director of the Interdepartmental Centre VICCS (Venice Centre for Climate Studies), rector's delegate for the Development of European research projects and delegate for International Cooperation for Development.
